Utterback, &c., On the 14th July, 1857, Shouse sold his land and some of his slaves for the purpose of paying some of his debts, and preferring a portion of his creditors. He was largely indebted at the time as surety for James H. Shouse. This ground was also fully sustained by the proof.

Within six months after the sale the appellees, who were also creditors, filed their petition against Shouse and the attaching creditors, seeking to subject to their debts also the property attached, on the ground that the under the statute of March, 1856, operated to transfer his property to the benefit of all his creditors, and that the attaching creditors had acquired no exclusive lein upon the pro-

The Court, per Simpson, Chief Justice, held-1. That the sale by Shouse under the act of 1856, (Sess. Acts, vol 1, page 107,) of itself operated to make the property of Shouse subject to distribution amongst all his creditors, and that the attaching creditors did not by their attachment law is different from the act of 1856, The attachment law gives no right or lein on the property of the debtor until the attachment is levied. It was contended by the attaching creditors, that the act of 1856 only conferred an city, and the sales of the bonds quoted and equity upon the general creditors, and that the lien of the attaching creditors is in the nature of a legal right, and is superior to the equity conferred by the statute. This Court held that an attaching creditor, as has been repeatedly decided, does not by his levy acquire legal title to the property attached. The right he acquires is subordinate to a mere equity created by the debtor before the commencement of his action, and which is asserted before his judgment. No greater interest can be sold under the attaching suit than the debtor had. If the attaching creditor knew of the sale in contemplation of insolvency, and had acquired the legal title by purchase under the attachment, he would be compelled to surrender to was decided that in a trial for a misdemeanor the defendant may consent to be tried by less dy, if appellees were entitled to relief.

But the indictment in this case charged that the defendant maliciously stabbed Arvine with the intent to kill. Upon this indictment the defendant, under section 258 of the Criminal Code, might have been found guilty, either of felony or of any lower degree of that offense. He was, in fact, found guilty of a lower degree of that offense; which was only a misdemeanor. Therefore, it was contended that the rule in the case of Murphy vs. Commonwealth did not apply to this case.

The court, per Judge Duvall, held-1. That if, as contended, the record presents Criminal Code, the error complained of is not available in this court, especially as the objection was not raised in the court below.

An act was passed by the Legislature of Kentucky, Feb. 17th, 1851, amending the charter of the railroad company by authorizing any city or county, subscribing stock in said company, under the original charter, to execute the bonds of such county or city, payable to the president and directors of said company, for the amounts subscribed, at such times as might be deemed best by the county courts or city councils, which bonds should be negotiable and transferable. It was in proof "that at the time the one does not pass the debtor's right to the property, hundred and fifty bonds were made and excuted by the city of Maysville, and delivered in contemplation of insolvency under the act to the railroad company, it was generally known amongst the people of the city that they unless suit is brought within six the county, and the bonds were generally praised and commended by the people of the city as a safe and profitable investment. From the issue of the bonds until July, 1857, the necessary tax was levied and collected, and the interest paid. For the coupons falling due July, 1857, no tax was levied or collected, and they

On the 26th October, 1857, the appellees filed their petition in the Mason Circuit Court, as authorized by title 10, chap 13, of Civil Code, praying writs of mandamus directed to the city council to show cause why they did not proceed to the levy and collection of the city authorities to consent to them in that taxes, as enjoined upon them by law.

After this petition was filed, a new board of councilmen were elected, and they failed to levy taxes to pay the coupons falling due 1st January, 1858. An amended petition was 3. The Court refrains from expressing an filed making the new board parties likewise,

Those of the old board filed a joint answer, in which they admitted the truth of all that was alleged in the petition, averring they had always been ready and willing to perform their consideration who makes his purchase before duty by levying the tax as the law required, as far as they were concerned. The other members of the council answered, denying the relief

That the appellees had a right to the specific relief asked. The Legislature having provided the way of raising by tax the payment of the interest, and directed the Maysville city council to levy the tax necessary from year to year to pay the amount of the interest, it was their duty to make the levy, and the writs of mandamus being intended to give the specific relief, was the proper proceeding. In support of the principle, he cited Bacon's Abridgement, vol. 6, title Mandamus, page 418. Blackstone says, "it issues in all cases where the party hath a right to have any thing done and hath no other specific means of compelling its performance. a case of felony, and not of misdemeanor, it follows that, according to section 334 of the of Penn., vel Thomas against the commissioners of Alleghany county, reported in American Law Register for Dec., 1858; Tapping on Mandamus, side page 30; Angell and Ames Corporations, sec. 707, page 715.

The Code of Practice (chap. 13, title 10) contains in substance the act of 1813. (Sec. 524.) The mandamus is not now a prerogative writ, but is a statutory writ, to be issued by courts of competent inrisdiction.

Another ground to reverse was, "that there never had been any refusal to levy the tax." The failure to make the levy was tantamount to a positive refusal.

But it is proved they were petitioned to levy the tax, and did not. This is equivalent to a refusal. No express refusal is necessary. (King vs. Northbeach Road, 5 Barne. & Ad. 982; Tapping, side page, 286.) Another objection was, "that the members of the board proceeded against were no longer members when the judgments were rendered." Held, immaterial. The change of members does not abate the proceeding. The judgment is obligatory on the members of council in office when the judgment is rendered. foregoing questions were as to the remedy and the pleadings. The next objection by appellants was, "that the subscription was ve It was contended the city of Maysville had no such authority previous to the enactment of the railroad charter. This is admitted by the court, but decided that the railroad charter. gives the authority-that it is an enabling act (Angell & Ames, 327; Pearce vs. Mad. & In apolis R. R., Amer. Law Reg., May, 1859.) Slack, &c., vs. Maysville & Lexington R. R. (13 B. Monroe,) decides this question.

It was argued it was void because the maythe president of the council.

Decided the act gave the council the authority if the vote was in favor of the subscription; that though the act, in its first and last part, conferring the authority, seems inconsistent, the latter part expressly gives the authority to the council. The last part of a statute, where its provisions are inconsistent, must govern. (1 Black Com., page 89 Held, the subscription was good and not void

It was further contended, that the bonds and coupons were not in form and effect as authorized by the act; that they are payable to the Mausville and Lexington railroad company, when the amended charter provides they shall be made payable to the president and directors of said company. Held, there was no departure in substance; that this objection is one of mere form. In either case, they were what the Legislature intended them to be-the property of the company. The case of Pendleton vs. Bank of Ky. (1 Mon., 175) settles this objection as being wholly invalid. Another objection was, that the bonds were payable on their face to the company, or its assignee or bearer. This is as untenable as the other objection. They were directed to be made negotiable, and transferable; as made, they were so, and it was competent for the form. Another objection was, that they were made payable in New York, both bonds and coupons, and that the interest was made payable semi-annually. The law does not require them to be payable at any particular place, nor any fixed periods for the interest. Being silent, it was evidently intended to leave the city authorities with power to regulate these matters as they pleased. These questions were decided in the case of Slack, &c., supra. Another objection was, that the consideration which was secured by the charter to the tax-payer had failed. Held, that the subscription and right to the stock was consideration enough to uphold the bonds and coupons.

The failure of the company—its becoming defunct and all that -- so that there is no one to issue certificates to tax-payers, does not show a failure of consideration. The city obtained her rights to the stock by the subscription, and that was the consideration for bonds and coupons. The last objection was, that the authority given by the act of the Legislature, and all proceedings under it, are unconstitutional and The case of Slack, &c., vs. Maysville & Lex. Railroad Company settles this question, and no reason is given for changing that opinion on the constitutional ground. In the case of Sharpless vs. City of Philadelphia the Supreme Court of Penn. divided-two judges dissenting-on a constitutional question like that in this case. That case governed them subsequently in the decision of the Alleghany bond case, where a like question was presented. So this court consider themselves bound by the decision in the Slack case. When the Slack case was decided, the bonds had not been issued. These are now in the hands of innocent purchasers. The present holders are in better condition than the railroad company was; for the act made the bonds negotiable and should be held to place them as such in the hands of innocent purchasers, freed of all equities, or causes that might avoid the bonds in the hands of the original parties. (Zabriskee vs. Cleveland, Columbus, & Cin. R. R. Co., by Justice McLean, Supreme Court U. S.) The

Our position is, that whatever author ity Congress may have to enact laws for the protection of slavery in the Territories, there is now no occasion for its exercise—there never has be and we believe there never will be. That its wanton exercise will be dangerous to our party and the Union. That when an emergency arises rendering such legislation imperiously necessary to protect slavery in the Territories, then we are urgent for it as we are urgent against it now. This is the broad ground on which the Democracy of Kentucky should take its stand. If there be those in our ranks who will desert us on this account, and contribute to our defeat, let their own onsciences be their punishment.

N. B.—A WORD OF EXPLANATION to those who have known us under the style of EVANS' & Co. The Business located by us at No. 677 Broadway, New York City, is the oldest established house in the country, and is known world-wide as the original "Evans & Co.'s Gift Bookstore." Many have taken the advantage of our popularity to advertise and to protect the few who may be unacquainted with us, we would state that we have no connection with any other Cift Book House—and though many advertise under the name of Evans & Co., the firm constituted by D. W. EVANS and J. H. PES-TON, is the first and only concern rightfully using the name. But to prevent all confusion in the future, we shall use the style of D. W. EVANS & CO., and all persons wrongfully using the name. But to prevent all confusion in the future, of the law.
